

02242024

Will Corcoran

2024 Collection

Often, One searches through the Complex. Void of all meaning levied by the Simple. God knew the paths which One would take. However, He likely did not yearn for One to reside in the Complex.

Thoughts for which One loses presence lend themselves to being Complex. If one realizes their carnal senses at all moments, they exist in the Simple.

Large structures prune original ecosystems. Large structures are void of the Simple. Structures exist across manifolds. Phones, networks, foundations.

Spending time in the Simple and with nature remove the Complex. Though, the Complex reinvites itself with One's lost intent. Through which One searches the Complex, he loses the Simple. Identifying the Simple is One's motivation in such a Complex world.

WRC